Steam courses

After you have been welcomed to the railway, had a brief chat about safety and donned your overalls, you will be introduced to your instructor. This will be followed by a technical introduction to the locomotive and explanation of the controls. After a period of hands-on familiarisation on the footplate you will couple up with a train. where you drive and fire the engine on the return trip of nearly 10 miles. As part of the course you will also take a trip down the line on the train to view the railway itself more fully.

The line begins at Shackerstone Station, a delightful Victorian country station which forms the headquarters of the railway. Here you will find the engine shed, a Midland Railway signalbox, the museum with a fine selection of railwayana and tea rooms. On platform two our gift shop occupies a building that is based on the original waiting room design, which once stood on the same site.
